Turner in Thailand

By Joshua Turner

I don't see the students again until after 5 p.m. and at this time Mahatai is abuzz with activity. The school highly recommends athletic activities and the students seem to take it to heart.

There is football (soccer to Americans), badminton, running, swimming, Takraw (think volleyball but you can't use your hands), wheelchair basketball, and another game similar to horseshoes but I Haven't figured out the name to that game. I have participated in many of these events.

Despite the disabilities the students may have, I find that I struggle to keep up. Usually this is most evident when I play wheelchair basketball. Almost every night there is a five-on-five game going and it is very competitive. Mobility and position are far more important in wheelchair basketball than able-bodied basketball and there will be a fight to get position. It is not uncommon for a body to fly out of the chair after colliding with another chair. No one has been hurt, but the bruises on my back can attest that the landing is anything but comfortable. Many of the students playing have massive, strong arms and chest from a lifetime of propelling their wheelchairs to the destinations they desire to go. Thailand has extremely poor handicap-friendly access to sidewalks or buildings so the students have had to become strong enough to overcome the inadequate access. Being that the students are so strong, I often lose in a battle to chase down a loose ball or stopping a fast break.

After basketball is over there is a group of students who come out to practice wheelchair dancing. The wheelchair dancing squad is very talented and every bit as strong as the wheelchair basketball players. This is evident by the handstands continued on page 2

they do in their chairs and they can make their chairs spin fast enough to make even an Olympic figure skater dizzy.

Apart from the athletic activities many of the students will gather at various tables outside and enjoy the cool evening with friends. They are always eager to invite you over to share some fruit which they usually cover with some spicy mixture. I have sat with groups like this on many nights and tried to learn some Thai as I teach them English. The students are doing a much better job at learning English than I am at learning Thai.

Many of the students play instruments, as well. It is not hard to hear them playing as they prefer rock music. In fact, one student even recorded a hit with a song he wrote about the school and has become somewhat famous. He is not the only student from the school to accomplish great things. One teacher has won several gold medals in the Paralympics and she is not the only one to win gold medals. Students have won medals in basketball, wheelchair racing, and we even had one teacher that won a gold medal in the shot put and then, to top things off, she had a baby the same day. If that is not endurance, then I don't know what is!

The students have also won many academic awards for web page design and electronic accomplishments. In fact, Mahatai students attend academic competitions that host many of the best electronic schools in the country. They usually come away with many awards and the school is usually among the top five overall. It is not a competition specifically for disabled people; therefore, the quality of education the students at Mahatai receive is second to none.

Every student attends Mahatai for two years. The school is free to every student which includes food, housing and a vocational training. Every student is given a job after they graduate from school and for some students it may be their first job. Many of the students have gone on to start their own business.

One year the school received several computers from the Thai government. This included the network support and assembly of the hardware. One particular worker was all smiles during the whole process. It was later realized he was a former student of the school.

Mahatai gives these students a new start on life. The students have embraced this second chance and have gone on to do great things. Many of the students lost their jobs because of their injuries, but they did not lose their will to work and they prove their willingness everyday. If not for Mahatai, where would they be?

Schweitzer hits the road to clean up government

Gov. Brian Schweitzer is leading a grassroots, citizens' movement to clean up Montana's government by pushing a tough, new ethics initiative for the 2006 ballot. The Governor and citizens now must gather thousands of signatures to place the measure on the November ballot, where Montanans can vote directly to slam the revolving door on lobbyists.

Gov. Schweitzer has been outspoken and critical of the influence of special interest lobbyists on state government, and has vowed to put real restrictions in place. Additionally, he has refused to appoint any lobbyists to state boards and commissions.

The Clean Government referendum would impose a two-year waiting period to close the revolving door through which elected officials, particularly some legislators, become lobbyists as soon as their terms expire. Montana will boast the toughest revolving door measure in the country if the initiative succeeds.

Letter to the Editor

Petition out to save kids' lives

Dear Editor,

I'm writing today to thank everyone from the bottom of my heart for helping make my trip to Washington, D.C. a success. If it was not for concerned citizens faxing letters to their congressmen, my trip would have failed because the voices of many are heard; the voice of one is easily ignored. I feel our Montana congressmen know the Kids & Cars Safety Act is important to the safety of children in Montana and the rest of the country.

I truly wish I didn't have to go to Washington, but after the passing of my daughter Madison, I feel that if I could stop an incident like this from happening to another child, my time and energy is being well spent.

For example, this last week in Harlowton a 16-year-old girl, Shiloh Theriault, was backed over by a friend in a restaurant parking lot. Her funeral was in Harlowton yesterday. My thoughts and prayers go out to this family. Could this accident have been prevented by the passage of S. 1948? I think the answer is most definably. Will it stop all incidents from happening? No, it will not. But this is just another rather tragic accident that could have been prevented by better safety measures by automakers. It is a FACT that over 50 backover accidents happen in this country every week usually because drivers cannot see behind their vehicles due to the blind zones. Out of those 50, two of those families will never see their children again. It is an undeniable fact that this is a problem.

But today I'm writing to ask for your help once again, because tomorrow (April 21st) I will be meeting with Representative Denny Rehberg here in Glasgow to talk about his stance on this issue. If you are interested in helping there will be petitions in local businesses asking for Rep. Rehberg's support of HR 2230 (Kids & Cars Safety Act). I would hope you would sign your name and help make this bill become reality to help protect our current and future children of Montana.

If you have any questions or wish to speak about this in more detail, please feel free to write or call me. 13 MDU RD, Nashua, MT 59248; phone 406-672-4338.
